

POETRY.

BE KIND.

Be kind to thy father—for when thou wert young
Who loved thee so fondly as he?
He caught the first accent that fell from thy tongue,
And join in thy innocent glee.
Be kind to the father—for now he is old,
His looks intermingled with grey,
His footsteps are feeble, once fearless and bold;
Thy father is passing away.

Be kind to thy mother—for lo on her brow
May traces of sorrow be seen,
O, well may'st thou cherish and comfort her now,
For loving and kind hath she been.
Remember thy mother—for she she will pray,
As long as God giveth her breath—
With accents of kindness then cheer her lone way,
E'en to the dark valley of death.

Be kind to thy brother—his heart will have
dread,
If the smiles of thy joy be withdrawn;
The flowers of feeling will fade at their birth,
If the dew of affection be gone;
Be kind to thy brother—wherever you are,
The love of a brother shall be
An ornament purer and richer by far
Than pearls from the depth of the sea.

Be kind to thy sister—not many may know
The depth of true sisterly love,
The wealth of the ocean lies fathoms below
The surface that sparkles above.
Thy kindness shall bring to the many sweet
hours,
And blessings thy pathway to crown,
Affection shall weave thee a garland of flowers,
More precious than wealth or renown.

Singular Revenge.

An accident is related in our latest Parisian files, which could have taken place nowhere else but in France. Mons. P., an old military officer—a man of harsh and unbending character, had resolved to marry his son to the daughter of one of his brother officers. The young man had formed other projects—had dreamed of another union; but, being of an exceedingly timid disposition, dared not openly resist his father's wishes. His first words of dissent having been answered by a torrent of abuse on the part of the old gentleman, poor Arthur permitted the month of betrothal to pass without further opposition; whilst his fiancée, Mlle. L., mistaking his sighs—his melancholy—for proofs positive of his passion to her, and considered him in duty bound to adore him.

The wedding day having arrived, the fiancée, with their attendants, presented themselves at the Mayoralty. Arthur was gloomy and reserved, and seemed to have his mind made up to some desperate resolve. The countenance of Emma was radiant with happiness.

The preliminaries having been arranged the Mayor put to the groom the usual question—"Arthur P., will you take this woman, Emma D., for your wife?" etc.

Arthur slowly raised his head, and in a trembling, yet clear, emphatic tone answered—"No!"

Of course, then followed a scene, to the portrayal of which we cannot hope to do justice. All was confusion. The party separated in disorder—the relatives of the interested bride indignantly demanding an explanation of Mons. P., senior, who looked the picture of petrification. As for Arthur, he had already escaped, and started directly for Paris.

A few days subsequent to this extraordinary occurrence, a young girl was seen rapidly ascending the stairs of a hotel garni in Rue St. Honore. She had learned from the porter that Mons. Arthur P.—arrived the preceding night. It was Emma C., came with her father and intended father-in-law, in search of the fugitive fiancée, who had so cruelly insulted her. But she was now alone. She tapped at the door of No. 17, and entered without waiting for an answer. The young man was reclining in bed, reading a newspaper. Emma walked straight to the bedside, and drawing from under her shawl an enormous horse-pistol, which doubtless she had procured from her father—

"Sir," said she to Arthur, her eyes flashing with anger, "you have grossly insulted me, and I demand reparation! Refuse this reparation at the peril of your life! Let us return at once to the Mayoralty of C., both in marriage costume. When the customary question is put to you, you will answer 'Yes,' and I shall answer 'No' when my honor will be satisfied."

Emma seconded her persuasive eloquence by brandishing her pistol with both hands. It was a powerful argument. After all she was right, or nearly so—at least such was Arthur's opinion. He promised, and set out the same day with his father, who ground his teeth during the journey, but uttered not a word.

Finally they presented themselves again at the Mayoralty, before the same magistrate. Arthur bravely answered 'Yes,' as arranged; and prepared his countenance to express the proper degree of indignation when he should hear the reply of his betrothed.

The Mayor resumed—"Emma C., do you consent?" etc. 'Yes,' answered Emma, in the most natural tone possible.

A Mistake.

We made quite a mis-conception in our last issue, stating that our Tiffin correspondent "Ios," gave us such a hard rap over the knuckles for our single-sightedness. When we perused the article we had not the communication of "Ios" before us, hence the blunder. But mis-takes are no rare occurrence in these days of progress, and can only ask our friend's pardon for this mishap on our part. We here give the communication above alluded to, which we hope will make amends for all blunders.

Tiffin, O., Dec. 1849.

Messrs. Editors:—
Indian summer with her "leaves and yellow leaf" has passed away, and Old Winter with her "Vapors, and clouds, and storms, Whirlwinds mad, and tempests dire," has made her appearance, and the chilling blasts of the north wind admonish us that we must keep in-doors and this is the reason you hear from me.

For pleasure give me merry winter! It is welcome! Soon we shall hear the merry and exhilarating laugh of the Damsel's fair, with the tinkling sound of—
"Bells."

Merry Tinkling Bells, Bells, Bells.
Rumor with her thousand tongues has never yet conveyed to our ears, the would be welcome tidings, that some of the fair damsels of Wyandot county had captured the hearts of the Bachelor Editors of the Pioneer! Can you not tell us of Wyandot melt their hearts of stone?

Business is reviving some what. The almost impossible state of the roads had almost made our merchants shut up stores! But now they being in a passable state "Tiffin is herself again!" The Indian Summer and unfavorable weather had delayed the farmers from killing their hogs; but now they have commenced operations and the town looks much like a May-raple. Flour $5.00, Wheat 70¢/bbl. Market firm in everything.

The eighth of January Convention is beginning to draw nigh and the Democracy of Ohio are all agitated upon the subject of the Governorship, many good democrats and true have been named. Judge Voon is generally the favorite of the Democracy of this portion of Ohio. Judge Wood is a radical and progressive democrat. A man of great talent, worth, and tact, a man infinitely suited for the coming contest. We claim Wood as the Champion of Northwestern Democracy and we claim his nomination on the ground that he is.

1st. A Northwestern man—who will fully do justice to the Northwest.
2d. That Southern and southeastern Ohio have had all the candidates for Governor, for the past TEN YEARS, and that a few men in the northern portion of Ohio have combined together to nominate and foist upon the Democracy of Ohio whoever they please. And they are doing so in the case of Col. McMill, Col. M. is a good democrat—but he has held office for many years and the MILLAGE, &c., may be shown up! Every person is glad to hear that the House and Senate are organized without a fuss, some dissatisfaction seems to exist among some of the democracy because Mr. BREKLEY was not re-nominated for speaker. Mr. B. declined for the sake of Harmony and Union. Mr. B. will make a most active member. Ever watchful and vigilant he will watch whiggery with a far more zealous eye than he ever was in the situation of Speaker.

The Messages have not yet been received.—They are expected to be rich! Such as "Zack" and "CHESNEY" can write.

*Our Correspondent is in error. At the present writing the Senate has as yet affected no organization.

Columbus Correspondence of the Dem. Pioneer.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 17th, 1849.

DEAR SIRS.—We are in the midst of a revolution, bloodless as yet.

The whigs hold out in opposition to an organization in the Senate. They have been driven from every point thus far, and only yield when by force of argument they are compelled to do so.

The Democracy have gained a fair recognition of Johnson's right to his seat and compelled them to go to balloting for Speaker.

How long this disorganization will be persisted in by the whigs, is a matter of great uncertainty. Their counsels are evidently divided. The real Federal portion of them desiring to prevent an organization at any time, so as to prevent the New Constitution bill from passing at this session, as required by the Constitution, and another and smaller portion being in favor of the New Constitution, desire an organization as soon as they can get the advantage, and will finally yield to the right through fear of the voice of an indignant people, and come to their duty when delay becomes dangerous.

The Democrats cast their votes, on the first days balloting, for Hon. A. G. Dimmock, for Speaker, and Swift voted each time with them. It was Mr. Dimmock's desire, then, to withdraw in hope that Swift might draw support from the Free Soilers on the whig side; what the result will be remains yet to be seen. One thing is certain, there is no yield to the Democracy; never was there a firmer set of fellows than now represent the indomitable democracy of Ohio in the Senate & House of Representatives.

Mr. Swift has 18 and Brewster Randall 18, each ballot; there have been 46 ballots and no election as yet.

In the House, nothing is done but to meet receive petitions, discuss resolutions, and adjourn. nothing more can be done while Federal whiggery prevents the organization of the Senate.

The investigation of the foul charges against Mr. Breslin, has closed before the committee and they will report in a day or two. It has resulted as I predicted, in an utter and overwhelming refutation of the charges, and in the probable fact that it was altogether a matter of accident or mistake, as the same thing has occurred four or five times this winter on the whig side.

Yours as ever,
ALTON.

Never anticipate wealth from any other source than labor; especially never place dependence upon becoming the possessor of an inheritance. "He who waits for dead men's shoes may have to go for a long time barefoot." "He who runs after a shadow, has a wearisome race."

Next Candidate for Governor.

The Democracy of Ohio, through their newspapers, are busily canvassing the merits of the different candidates whose names have been offered in connection with the nomination for Governor. We have already published a list of all the individuals prominently presented. In making a choice, it should be the first object of the Democracy to select a standard bearer, whose mental and moral qualifications are above reproach. In the next place, it is exceedingly desirable that our candidate should be a well known enemy both to white bondage in our own State and to negro bondage in the territories. If a public man, his position on these questions such as to render it unnecessary to introduce vouchers that his sentiments are orthodox. He should be no convert of yesterday, yielding a reluctant assent to the resistless current of public sentiment. He should be a man who stood boldly in the breach when the Ohio Democracy have confronted the Bank legions and fought them to the hilt. He should be a man whose bitter denunciation of the "hard money issue," have afforded neither aid nor comfort to the enemy. He should be a man who (in the contest of 1846) withheld his services when the party, with Tod as its Standard bearer, were engaged in a death struggle with the banking power of the state. We are glad to know that the Democracy have hosts of men whose uniform and cordial acquiescence in the will of their party, is a sufficient endorsement of their faithfulness. The support which they have ever rendered their party, has been cordial, effective and unconditional. Let our candidate be chosen from among this description of the Democratic soldiery.—Let him be taken from those who have never stood back-luke-warm and indifferent whilst their brethren were involved in almighty struggle with the adherents and allies of monopoly. We want no such leader at the head of the Democratic column. Let us have a standard bearer who is genuinely hostile to the curse of paper money as well as the blight of territorial slavery. "As 'an old soldier in the wars,' we are not yet prepared to forget what we have been battling for through many long years of patient toil. When we go into the fight, we ask only for a leader whose past history is a guarantee of his future trustworthiness and fidelity.—Ohio Patriot.
